President's Report

It has been a busy period since my last report. The garden is now blooming in all its early summer splendor, the lilacs are in bloom and the rhododendrons and azaleas are at their splendiferous best. It is truly worth a trip to the gardens one evening to view them. If you go over in an evening be sure to park in the Prospect St. parking lot and walk down the hill. Remember that the Cameron Court gates close at 3:30 PM.

The last Sunday in May was our 18th annual plant sale. After weeks of cool rainy weather, the weekend provided absolutely perfect weather. Unfortunately it lured many of our customers to other recreational sites and our turnout appeared to be a bit lower than in past years.

As you may have read in the Daily Gleaner or heard on CBC Radio the Botanic Garden was awarded a $50,000 grant by the Fredericton Community Foundation. (see inserted Daily Gleaner article) This grant was the largest ever awarded by the Foundation and was in support of our rebuilding the Entrance Garden off Prospect St. As a result of this good fortune the present Entrance Garden will be torn up and unusable this summer. This presents some problems as this garden will be unavailable for the Treasured Garden Tour’s annual plant sale.

Cash to help garden grow

Expect to see major changes at the Fredericton Botanic Garden this summer. The organization received a boost from the Fredericton Community Foundation to redo its entry gardens off Prospect Street. It's a project the Fredericton Botanic Garden Association could not afford to do without the $50,000 grant it got as part of the foundation's 50th anniversary celebration.

Membership

We would like to extend a hearty welcome to the many new members joining our Association who signed up during the Plant Sale, and to all of the members who chose to renew their memberships at that time. Thank you all for your support - it is much appreciated. Special thanks to new members Susan Phillips and Pierre El-Khoury, who volunteered to help with the Plant Sale, and who have joined the Membership Committee.

The names of all new members are entered in a Grand Prize draw (open to new members, to donors of gift memberships, and to anyone signing up a new member) for a beautiful and spacious camel coloured Garden screen tent - a lovely addition to any back yard. The winner will be announced July 31st. We will contact the winner.

Many membership forms were handed out (along with the map of the layout of the Plant Sale), and as a result we hope we can welcome more new members over the coming weeks as the forms are mailed in. If you have recently received a renewal reminder in the mail, please do not forget to send it in right away.

At this year’s plant sale the Botanic Boutique was in a new location. Many thanks to the volunteers who took care of decorating the Boutique and running it. For those who did not see it at the Plant Sale, the Boutique will be open again at selected future events. Be sure to visit it!

We have been asked to consider having T-shirts made up with the FBGA logo. To help us gauge interest in this, please e-mail Lucy Dyer (ldyer@unb.ca) if you would be interested in purchasing a T-shirt. Thank you for your help with this.

Plant Hunters
By Jane Seabrook

So you thought “extreme sports” were new. Well you have never met a plant hunter! Even modern plant hunters, looking for plants with new medicinal qualities, have to leave civilization behind and tromp through jungles and up mountain peaks. Plant hunters 200 years ago had to be physically brave, madly enthusiastic, oblivious to danger (hostile local people, rock slides, snakes, bears, bad food and bandits), and capable of tolerating boredom on long trips. These intrepid plant explorers frequently lost their field notes and plant collections when they fell into rivers, and had to start collecting over again. And they had to keep the seeds, tubers, bulbs and plant cuttings alive until they got to home base.

Many plant hunters died while exploring. Frank Meyer, who was a Dutch plant collector, sent soybeans, kiwi fruit, yellow roses, peaches, apricots, almonds and lilacs from China back to the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) in the early part of the 20th Century. Meyer was absolutely intrepid and finally died having fallen from a river boat on the Yangtze River in China. Meyer’s boss at the USDA was David Fairchild, son-in-law of Alexander Graham Bell, also a famous plant explorer who introduced the Japanese flowering cherry trees to Washington, D.C.

Robert Fortune brought chrysanthemums, Japanese primulas, bleeding heart, weigelia, forsythia, tree peonies, azaleas and rhododendrons to Europe from Japan. Many of the modern cultivars of rhododendrons and azaleas that have bloomed so beautifully this spring in the Fredericton Botanic Garden owe many of their genes to the plant material introduced from Japan.

Scotsman David Douglas explored much of Western North America for Kew Gardens near London. He explored for timber trees and collected seeds of Douglas fir (named for him) and sugar pine. Douglas also met an untimely end and died in Hawaii.

The Tradescant family, father and son, returned to England from explorations of North America with lupins, cornflowers, Virginia creeper, Michaelmass daisies and the spiderwort (Tradescantia) which bears their name.

In turn, Japanese plant collectors returned to Japan with plant treasures from Europe and North America. Botanizing was, and still is, a tough game. Just imagine slogging through the bush without GPS, cell phones or freeze dried food or bug spray, AND having to keep your field notes and fragile plant collections alive for your bosses back home. Our lovely gardens and the varied food on our supper tables are a testament to the work of plant hunters.

Site Development
by Richard Tarn

News of the Foundation 50 Grant from the Fredericton Community Foundation for the redevelopment of the Entrance Garden is described elsewhere in this Newsletter. In this space I describe other changes in the Garden this summer.

First I would like to introduce our summer students. Courtney Carrier and Meaghan Balzar are hired with support from the provincial SEED program and the federal SCP program respectively to help with the upkeep of the Garden. They are working with student Chelsey Burns, a city casual employee, who is with us for a second year. All are working with Jeff Graham who oversees the Garden for the City. Please make them feel welcome when you meet them in the Garden.

The White Garden, sponsored by Scott’s Nursery Ltd, was constructed and partially planted last fall. It requires some additional planting and then will be formally opened. Watch for the announcement of this event.

The pond was enlarged last fall and now must be landscaped. Also, the adjacent Hal Hinds Memorial Garden needs some further work to move the access pathways to drier areas and to add new plants. The Site Development Committee is inviting volunteers to help with these tasks. When the site dries up from the heavy rains of recent weeks we’ll be calling members to join us for several Saturday work parties. We hope those of you who indicated on your membership application an interest in helping with Garden projects will be able to join us for some of this work, to meet other members and to have fun. Announcements will go to all members on our e-mail distribution list.

Elsewhere in the Garden we have new beds of daylilies and oriental lilies. These replace the overgrown rose beds. Before some of you complain about the absence of roses, we are planning a new planting of roses using hardy varieties on their own roots that will be easier to maintain.

I hope you have had the opportunity to see the beautiful rhododendrons and azaleas in the past few weeks. Be sure to visit the Garden frequently during the summer to see the changes - take your family, your friends and visitors - and hope for some sunshine.

Talks in the Garden

I would like to thank all of the wonderful speakers who kindly donated their time and energy to our Talks in the Garden Series. Your truly informative and interesting talks helped to ensure continuing strong support from our membership, who appreciated your efforts.

I would also like to thank Wendy Bourque and Lucy Dyer who jumped in and ran events when needed.

Thank you all for making my first year a success.

Next season’s schedule for the Talks in the Garden Series will be in a later newsletter.
